Bill James Allows One Hit and Trims American Stars.

The National All-Stars were trimmed by the American All-Stars Wednesday at San Francisco, by a 2 to 1 score. Bill James hurled for the Americans and allowed only one hit. As a tribute to the memory of Jack Sheridan, the famous umpire, who died Monday, the players wore black on their sleeves.

The Loudins, winners of the Sweitzer cup, will show once more on the diamond before retiring for the season. A game has been scheduled with the Murleys to be played Sunday at Murley Park.

Amateur Athletic Federation officials will meet at the Boston Oyster House Friday night to arrange their sport schedule.

Sam Langford, Boston "tar baby," will meet Tom McMahon at Los Angeles Nov. 10. The bout will go 20 rounds.

New York is 300 years old, and some time during the next 300 may win an American League pennant.

A new chrysanthemum has been named for Christy Mathewson; probably it is a fader.

Memphis has produced a one-legged baseball player; seize him, scouts, there is 50 per cent less chance for him to have Charlie Horse.

Connie Mack hasn't changed a particle; paying big salaries always has been his pet aversion; and judging from results he is right. A prosperous ballplayer usually is a bad ballplayer.

Well, having saved the country at the polls we can now return to the real business of ending the baseball war.

The greed of boxers has killed one Milwaukee club; the "greed" of the ballplayers has damaged baseball. How long will it take the athletes to realize that the owners are the only ones to indulge in greed.

The American League Starts Annual Meeting Here Today

The American League starts its annual meeting here today. The officials have a lot of important business to thrash out and there is a good possibility that some interesting announcements may come out of the gathering.

In regard to the uneasiness in the baseball world, it is figured that the American League will handle any affairs in that line with neutrality and sympathy. Nobody knows right now what the next big move in the diamond sport muddle is going to be. We've all got to wait, watch and wonder.

Probably the next most important piece of business to come up will be the decision as to the ownership of the New York Yankees. It is a cinch the Yankees will be discussed, but whether any definite settlement is made, in any line, is hard to say.

And still the gloom hangs over the student body of the Chicago University. With "Dolly" Gray out of the game with Illinois, Nov. 14, it is generally figured that the Illinois aggregation has the best chance to clean up. And there is a big chance that Gray will not be able to be in the line-up. His right ankle is still all bunged up.

Zuppke's men are pretty much all in good shape and he has a large field to pick from. On the other hand, Stagg's crew is full of fight and in good, husky condition.

When one takes into consideration every portion of the two teams the Illinois crew seems to have a little the best of it. The line of the latter aggregation is a wonder and hard to break through. The Illinois backs are speed men and ground gainers. Chicago has several good ground gainers to fall back on, however, in Pete Russell, Schaefer, Flood and Acker. A great gridiron battle should be
